

Giving from the Heart to Myself

---

NVC Chapter 1: Giving from the Heart (Part 2)

- ① When something “pushes a button,” eliciting quick and strong sensations, we refer to it as a trigger. Recall a triggering incident.

- ② Listen to what you are telling yourself about the incident. NVC folks call these the “jackal” thoughts. Make the jackal list below. The juicier these thoughts are, the more revealing they will be. Were these thoughts: about yourself, about the other person or about the world/the way things are.

- ③ Review the jackal list and list feelings and needs being expressed in these thoughts. Translate the jackal thoughts using the feelings and needs you have identified.

- ④ Sit with the feelings and needs you have identified until you feel a shift. This usually comes after I have done two things:
1. I mourned that I am not connected to this beautiful need (in this situation). I miss it; and
  2. I recognize how beautiful this need is and how much I value it and want it to be part of my life. Explore what it would mean to me if this need were abundantly met.
- ⑤ Do you have any request to make? This could be a request of yourself or the other person.

Giving from the Heart to Myself

NVC Chapter 1: Giving from the Heart (Part 2)

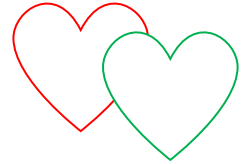

Write a trigger statement:

My Thoughts

My Feelings and Needs

One you have identified a need, spend a moment exploring “the beauty of the need.” What would it be like if this need were abundantly met? What if everyone in the world had this need met and it were as common as air? Sink into the beauty of the need.

Do you have a request?

Debrief: What was this exercise like for you? Unmute yourself to speak to the large group.

One word check-out: Say your name and share your one word with the rest of the group.